This project will provide funding to the City of Wainwright to continue the Youth Program operated at the Robert James Community Center. It will also expand the program to include a strong intergenerational cultural component. The center is open six days a week and has computers, recreational equipment, and activities for the community's youth. Demonstrations and classes in traditional subsistence arts and skills taught by local elders and other skilled individuals will be offered weekly. These demonstrations and classes will include activities such as sled making, native food preparation, drum making, harpoon making, and skin sewing.
