Re: Fairbanks Pipeline Training Center

Dear Representative Millett,

It has been recommended to me that I provide you with some information on activities at the Fairbanks Pipeline Training Center since your visit on September 20, 2012.

Before I do this, I want to express to you my apologies for not personally being at the Center when you and Commissioner Dianne Blumer visited our campus. On the day you visited, I was 85 miles up an Interior river breaking down my moose hunting camp. As an Alaska Legislator who is known to enjoy hunting and the outdoors, I hope you would find this an acceptable reason for my absence.

As you may know, the Fairbanks Pipeline Training Center Trust (FPTCT) is a 501 (c) (3) non-profit educational trust formed in October 2008 to develop, operate and maintain the Fairbanks Pipeline Training Center located in Fairbanks, Alaska. It is recognized by the Alaska Department of Labor and Workforce Development as a statewide regional training center and its focus is to provide training opportunities to Alaskans in the construction industry and in the construction, operation and maintenance of mainline pipelines, including the construction and operation of oil and gas process systems. While the Center's emphasis is in providing opportunities for Alaskans to enter into construction careers through federally registered apprenticeship programs and in the training of pipeline occupations, such as pipeline welders, this is not all we do.
