The fiscal year-to-date average price of Alaska North Slope crude as of August 1, 2007, was $72.52 per barrel per the Department of Revenue, which is $17.80 (32.5%) above DOR's Spring 2007 FY08 forecast amount of $54.72.

This fund change replaces unrealized Receipt Supported Services authority with general funds to ensure that life safety inspections, remote fire investigations, and other essential services continue at budgeted levels. Without knowing how much revenue will be received each fiscal year, it is very difficult to budget. Fire and Life Safety functions are dependent upon those revenues to supplement existing general funds in order to perform life safety inspections, respond to remote fire investigations around Alaska, and support training efforts around the state.

RSS revenue has fallen well short of budgeted authority as the Plan Review Bureau has seen a decrease in large construction plan reviews from past fiscal years. The decrease can be partially attributed to less large-construction work where the plan reviews might cost upwards of $40,000 each, and to the fact that many cities are now doing their own plan reviews, such as Fairbanks, Wasilla, and Soldotna. For example, beginning in FY2007, the City of Wasilla began doing their own plan reviews for construction occurring in their area of responsibility. This resulted in an approximate net decrease of around $60,000 revenue from plan reviews now done by the City of Wasilla alone. The total decrease in plan review revenues from FY2006 to FY2007 was $317,000.

Receipt Supported Services revenues reached a peak in FY2005 at $1,290.5, and have declined each year to the FY2007 total of $907.1.

The Plan Review Bureau will continue to be fully funded from the fees it generates from plan reviews. This request will provide enough general funds for the division's other bureaus to plan regular life safety inspections, and budget for other programs to meet the mission of preventing loss of life and property from fire.

Fund increased fuel and utility costs throughout the department. Over the past several years the department has been able to absorb these costs due to the high number of vacant positions, primarily commissioned positions. The department's improved recruiting efforts for state troopers have been successful and the number of vacant positions is expected to be significantly lower, meaning personal services funding is no longer available to offset these other costs.

Historically, when the need arose to perform inspections on oil facilities in remote locations, the Division of Fire and Life Safety used industry's corporate aircraft and facilities. To avoid the appearance of impropriety, this policy has changed. This funding will pay for the extra costs of this travel, including airfare, lodging, and meals. These inspections are necessary to ensure that the companies' fire and life safety systems are up to standard and operational. This equipment helps to reduce the loss of life and property in the event there is a fire.

For many years the Division of Fire and Life Safety has concentrated its efforts on inspecting critical structures such as schools, hospitals, and large industrial occupancies. There was never enough funding to do the required inspections on other public assemblies such as churches, community centers, and correctional facilities on a regularly scheduled basis. In FY2007, due to revenue shortfalls, this situation was exacerbated. Only a small portion of the remote/rural building inspections occurred. With this additional funding, inspectors will be able to perform the necessary inspections on a regularly scheduled basis. Having safer buildings will help to reduce the loss of life and property to fire.

These general funds replace unrealizable federal funds to establish the Alaska Office of Rural Fire Protection. The goal of this office is to provide technical assistance and specialized training to low income, rural communities for the specific purpose of establishing and maintaining a local fire department and emergency response organization. By assisting communities in developing their fire prevention and response units, each community's economy will benefit by building and improving their ability to protect their infrastructures from fire. This office will provide the long-term oversight, continued logistical assistance, and training that these communities need to maintain viability of their local fire response units.
Presently, through the resources of "Project Code Red", funding is available for initial equipment purchase and training, but not for continued support and assistance. There are currently 124 rural communities' throughout Alaska that have the Project Code Red equipment and initial training. The division has found that after two years without on-going training and maintenance, the communities forget this equipment is available, and it does not get deployed when needed. There are several instances where this has occurred. This funding will allow the division to sustain this program and work towards the goal of reducing the loss of life and property to fire. Without this funding this equipment will go to waste. Investing $250,000 per year will provide sustained fire protection in 124 rural Alaskan communities.
This office will be in the Training and Education Bureau (TEB) under the direction of the Fire Training Administrator. Office space will be located in Palmer. The staff will respond directly to requests for assistance from the rural communities in Alaska. Existing positions will handle these new duties. No new positions are requested.

The Department of Public Safety requests $870.0 in general funds to replace lost federal funds for the rural alcohol interdiction team. This team is comprised of five state troopers and one criminal justice technician located in Anchorage, Bethel, Nome, and Kotzebue. These positions had been funded through an annual federal earmark that is no longer available.
The rural alcohol interdiction program focuses on keeping alcohol out of dry communities, educating the residents in community team policing, and then empowering the residents to assist by taking an active role in the betterment of their communities by keeping illegal alcohol out of their villages. Without this general fund increment, alcohol interdiction efforts will be curtailed.

Transfer all positions and associated funding out of Judicial Services - Anchorage to the Alaska Bureau of Judicial Services. The Division of Alaska State Troopers is consolidating all of its judicial services functions, statewide, into one new bureau, the Alaska Bureau of Judicial Services (ABJS). Currently, except for Anchorage, all judicial services troopers, court service officers, and their support staff are assigned to the detachment where their particular court is located and report to that detachment commander. Judicial services personnel in Anchorage report directly to the AST Director's Office. This has resulted in inconsistencies in how service is provided to the various courts around the state. By combining all of these officers under one commander, these inconsistencies can better be resolved. A new budget component was created due to the dissimilar names.

Fund increased costs of transporting prisoners. $430.0 is in response to increased travel costs due to higher fuel and airline ticket costs. $25.0 is for the increased cost of the DPS aircraft section's aircraft fleet operations used for the transportation of prisoners.

Over the past several years the department has been able to absorb these costs due to the high number of vacant positions, primarily commissioned positions. The department's improved recruiting efforts for state troopers have been successful and the number of vacant positions is expected to be significantly lower, meaning personal services funding is no longer available to offset these other costs.

Fund increased fuel and utility costs throughout the department. Over the past several years the department has been able to absorb these costs due to the high number of vacant positions, primarily commissioned positions. The department's improved recruiting efforts for state troopers have been successful and the number of vacant positions is expected to be significantly lower, meaning personal services funding is no longer available to offset these other costs.

The commissioned ranks of the Alaska State Troopers are projected to be nearly 100 percent filled by the end of FY2008 due to augmented recruitment efforts. The AST Director's Office currently has a small amount of one-time vacancy savings. This transaction transfers part of this savings to AST Detachments to help lower their vacancy factor.

The Division of Alaska State Troopers is consolidating all of its judicial services functions, statewide, into one new bureau, the Alaska Bureau of Judicial Services (ABJS). Currently, except for Anchorage, all judicial services troopers, court service officers, and their support staff are assigned to the detachment where their particular court is located and report to that detachment commander. Judicial services personnel in Anchorage report directly to the AST Director's Office. This has resulted in inconsistencies in how service is provided to the various courts around the state. By combining all of these officers under one commander, these inconsistencies can better be resolved.

PCN 12-1919 State Trooper is reclassified to Captain to supervise this new bureau and forty PCNs are transferred with accompanying funding from AST Detachments to Judicial Services - Anchorage. The budgetary name change from Judicial Services - Anchorage to Alaska Bureau of Judicial Services will take place in the FY2009 budget.

Add two Administrative Investigators (what many police departments call "internal affairs investigators") to provide dedicated resources to specifically address non-criminal personnel investigations within AST and AWT, in the department's other divisions, and occasionally in other police departments. Current practice is to assign internal investigations to troopers and investigators assigned to field detachments and bureaus. This causes delays in criminal investigations because troopers become focused on the administrative investigations, which are complex and time consuming due to federal case law related to police agency internal investigations and provisions of bargaining unit agreements. Addition of these two investigators would enhance DPS's ability to respond to citizen complaints of trooper malfeasance and to conduct investigations (when requested, and resources permitting) into criminal and non-criminal matters at other agencies. And finally, these new investigators would enable DPS to conduct sensitive non-DPS investigations and to investigate political corruption cases. Two new state trooper positions are added in the budget request. The positions will be located in Anchorage (PCN 12-#030 and 12-#031).

Because of the lead time required to recruit new troopers, the FY2008 increment adding five new Alaska Wildlife Troopers assumed the positions would not be filled until the spring Alaska Law Enforcement Training Academy in mid-February 2008, and only included 4.5 months of personal services funding. This change record reallocates the FY2008 one-time costs for the new troopers (academy training, vehicle costs purchase, firearms, and other equipment) to fund most of the personal services and other costs of these five positions, and funds the remaining costs.

The Division of Alaska Wildlife Troopers is a vital component of the Department of Public Safety, and enforcement of wildlife laws is one of six core missions of the Alaska State Troopers. The long term success in meeting this critical mission is dependent on increasing the numbers of troopers in the wildlife enforcement division to a sustained, suitable level in order to maintain a sufficient law enforcement presence throughout the state. These troopers will provide an increased presence with the reestablishment of the Yakutat Post, which closed in 1996, as well as bolstering the Fairbanks, Palmer, and Soldotna regions. One of the new positions will provide investigative enforcement in the investigation unit.

Add two new Division of Alaska Wildlife Troopers (AWT) field troopers as part of the division's long-term goal of building up division commissioned staff levels from its current level of 96 to 120 in order to maintain a sufficient law enforcement presence throughout the state. As a first step toward this goal, five new troopers were added in FY2008. Since 1984, budget reductions have reduced the number of commissioned wildlife troopers from a high of 118 to the current level of 96, including supervisors. Unlike municipal areas that have assumed responsibility for police work within their jurisdictions, the Alaska wildlife trooper's workload has not been absorbed and continues to increase as the state's population increases. Alaska wildlife troopers are frequently called upon to do enforcement even in the most populated areas of the state, such as Ship Creek in Anchorage. This takes troopers out of the field, and with current staffing levels, does not allow for patrols in other areas of the state at crucial times. Requests for services and technical support from the Wildlife Investigations Bureau have increased. One of the AWT investigators is being trained in computer forensics as many of the investigations have become more complex in nature and often involve computers. Alaska's hunting and fishing renewable resources are worth over a billion dollars per year to sportsman, tourists, and Alaskans whose livelihoods depends on these resources. Each AWT field trooper has to cover, on average, over 11,151 square miles of land mass, coastline, and waterway. Because of Alaska's vast land mass, the challenge of having a full staff of 96 AWT troopers monitor 786,404 licensed resource users is a staggering 8,192 to 1 ratio. This request will provide increased wildlife trooper support in Fairbanks (PCN 12-#027) and Cooper Landing (PCN 12-#028).

Add one new Division of Alaska Wildlife Troopers (AWT) investigator as part of the division's long-term goal of building up division commissioned staff levels from its current level of 96 to 120 in order to maintain a sufficient law enforcement presence throughout the state. As a first step toward this goal, five new troopers were added in FY2008. Since 1984, budget reductions have reduced the number of commissioned wildlife troopers from a high of 118 to the current level of 96, including supervisors. Unlike municipal areas that have assumed responsibility for police work within their jurisdictions, the Alaska wildlife trooper's workload has not been absorbed and continues to increase as the state's population increases. Alaska wildlife troopers are frequently called upon to do enforcement even in the most populated areas of the state, such as Ship Creek in Anchorage. This takes troopers out of the field, and with current staffing levels, does not allow for patrols in other areas of the state at crucial times. Requests for services and technical support from the Wildlife Investigations Bureau have increased. One of the AWT investigators is being trained in computer forensics as many of the investigations have become more complex in nature and often involve computers. Alaska's hunting and fishing renewable resources are worth over a billion dollars per year to sportsman, tourists, and Alaskans whose livelihoods depends on these resources. Each AWT field trooper has to cover, on average, over 11,151 square miles of land mass, coastline, and waterway. Because of Alaska's vast land mass, the challenge of having a full staff of ninety-six AWT troopers monitor 786,404 licensed resource users is a staggering 8,192 to 1 ratio. This request will provide increased wildlife trooper support to the Anchorage based WIU (PCN 12-#026).

Transfer four corporal positions budgeted in the AST Detachments component to the Training Academy component. These positions have been historically budgeted in AST Detachments rather than the Training Academy. This will allow for all of the positions and associated cost of the DPS Training Academy to be in one budget unit. The corporal positions budgeted in Sitka that are being transferred include: 12-1090, 12-1174, 12-1306, and 12-1885.

Currently, no Database Specialists are assigned to Department of Public Safety (DPS). Although the department's public safety mission is already critically dependent on MS SQL Server, there are no information technology (IT) resources within DPS to manage, maintain, and develop this key infrastructure supporting the Alaska law enforcement community.

The APSIN Redesign project will continue to migrate critical APSIN operational and reporting data to the MS SQL Server platform. The high profile Sex Offender Registry (SOR) and its live interface to the National Sex Offender Registry (NSOPR) are now SQL-based. Additionally, numerous DPS line-of-business applications have been migrated to the SQL Server platform, including the AFIS (Automated Fingerprint Identification) interface, Amber Alert, DMV Digital Photo, and the Security Log. Major support systems, including the DPS Help Desk system, are now SQL-based. As more of the Alaska Public Safety Information Network (APSIN) migrates from the mainframe to MS SQL Server, this system will be used by statewide law enforcement agencies.

Problems with or failure of any of these SQL-based applications and systems will have a direct impact on law enforcement in Alaska and these failures could quickly become public issues.

Requirements have quickly grown to the point where dedicated database specialist resources are required to support the many DPS SQL databases, users, developers, and applications which are in production, as well as those that will be deployed in the near future. Statewide law enforcement has complex data and security requirements that call for specialized knowledge and dedicated focus.

This position will support core departmental infrastructure which affects all programs throughout Public Safety. If this request is not approved, DPS will need to assign these duties to other programmer/analyst staff, which would require them to be trained to support these platforms. This would in turn require the IT section to request new positions to support the existing workload, which will be high for the next few years to support APSIN Redesign and Migration.

This request directly affects the desired end results for many departmental activities. These are directly tracked using SQL tools that would be supported by this position. Lack of support could impact the integrity, consistency, and timeliness of missions and measures reporting.

Add a new Criminal Justice Technician I position to help prevent an increase in the backlog in fingerprint card processing and in court disposition processing.

The Records and Identification component is responsible for entry and updating of arrest, prosecution, and disposition information in the Alaska Public Safety Information Network (APSIN) criminal history record repository and the National Criminal Information Center (NCIC) Interstate Identification Index (III). The volume of criminal fingerprint cards received over the last 10 years has increased 55 percent, and the number of requests for criminal history background checks for employment or licensing purposes has increased over 120 percent.

Historically, the data quality received on criminal fingerprint cards has been poor. During FY2006, approximately 51 percent of all fingerprint cards received required some manual intervention and correction before the processing and record updating can proceed.

As the electronic submission of fingerprints increases, an error correction system has been developed to capture and hold fingerprint card transactions with apparent discrepancies as they are processed electronically through the repository. This process will eventually significantly improve the timeliness of processing of these fingerprint cards.

This new position will be responsible for research, analysis, and correction of fingerprint card transactions that are submitted to the Error Correction System (ECS). Submittal of transactions to the ECS indicates that a data error either on the fingerprint card or in APSIN has occurred. The technician must examine multiple databases to identify and correct these data errors.

This bill significantly expands the Alaska state crime lab responsibilities regarding DNA by requiring the collection of DNA from persons (not including minors) who have been arrested for qualifying offenses (crimes against persons or felonies under AS 11 or AS 28.35, or under a law or ordinance with similar elements). The bill further requires the crime lab to make every reasonable effort to process the qualifying DNA samples and enter the resulting identification data into the identification registration system within 90 days of receipt of the sample. This fiscal note includes the costs of programming changes to the state's criminal records information system (APSIN) and the laboratory's information system (LIMS), additional personnel to handle the new caseload and shortened turnaround time, and the non-personal services costs to support the new positions.

The chemistry sections of the laboratory use sophisticated and expensive instrumentation to perform analysis of physical evidence. To insure the continued flow of cases, the instruments are covered by service contracts that provide for routine maintenance and repairs within 24 hours of instrument failure.

While the laboratory budget has recently been increased to cover this expense, the costs of the service contracts have continued to increase and $20.0 is being requested to insure continued coverage of scientific instruments.

If funding is not available to provide service contracts on scientific instruments, analysts will need to stop analyzing cases to spend time troubleshooting and repairing instruments. This will lead to long delays in the processing of blood alcohol and controlled substance cases.
