Detailed Project Description and Justification:

Project will construct additional dock and upland improvements at the crane dock in Petersburg.

Petersburg is homeport to one of Alaska's most productive commercial fishing fleets and increasingly becoming a popular destination among cruiseship and recreational marine vessels. The infrastructure necessary to support these vessels is severely limited. Currently there is one public crane dock that provides service to the entire Petersburg commercial fishing fleet. The public dock approach is too narrow to allow large vehicles, or vehicles with utility trailers to back onto and turn into position for crane operation to load and unload equipment aboard marine vessels. The approach ramp for this highly used area also is used as access to and from the South Harbor, our largest community owned harbor, further adding to the dock approach congestion.

This project will widen the deck to allow vehicles to turn and trade positions with newly arriving vehicles. This will speed up the loading of commercial vessels and improve safety for users and pedestrians in South Harbor.
