The Department of Law (Law) charges client agencies a rate for the legal services provided by Law in order to recoup the cost of providing such services. The federally-approved rate methodology is reviewed and updated on an annual basis by Law to ensure that the rate is appropriate. Law will be charging the maximum allowable rate for legal services to client agencies based on the existing methodology, which will increase the Civil Division's need for interagency receipt authority while reducing the need for unrestricted general funds.
