Brief Summary and Statement of Need:
Currently the Alaska Army National Guard does not have adequate barracks space to house soldiers during training events on Joint Base Elmendorf Richardson (JBER). This affects approximately 250 soldiers that travel to Anchorage for training at various times throughout the year. Lack of sleeping quarters also has a detrimental effect on ability to sustain responders during disasters or to extend the reach of ground troops into the Arctic for homeland defense. This project will provide for engineering, design, and cost estimating to convert the old United States Property and Fiscal Office (USPFO) building into barracks space.
